Good Food  Good People  Good Life

What do you do at New Morning?

This is a question we get! The way I see it, Goodness is our business. And yes, we are proud to be home to CT’s largest selection of organic produce, humanely raised local meats and dairy products as well as The Provender, our award-winning fresh food counter. Oh, and we also have the most complete selection of Non-GMO wellness products in CT! But… what has guided and driven us to take this road less traveled? Three words – to do good. Since 1971, one of New Morning Market’s operational principles was to do good, and I think that 43 years of providing “good food” to good people for a good life is a testament to our commitment to New Morning’s Mission.

We recognize that it is not always clear what “good food” is. You can trust we select only the best for you and your family. Our friendly, knowledgeable staff is always happy to talk with you about which cleaning products are safest, what supplements are best, why our local, grass fed beef is so good, or which farm grew the vegetables you’re buying. In the age of an impersonal global food system, this personal support and insider knowledge of good food is essential to your health and the health of your family.

All of us at New Morning invite you to a life full of Goodness as we continue our way down the road less traveled… together.

- John Pitteri

New Morning Market

Connecticut’s Original Independently Owned Natural & Organic Marketplace!

129 Main St. North, Woodbury CT (203) 263-4868 www.newmorn.com
Welcome!

We hope you enjoy this invaluable guide to sourcing everything you need for your table, garden, yard, and farm. Our goal is to inspire you to try new foods, buy more products locally, and explore Connecticut’s diverse landscape throughout the seasons.

Dig in and discover our members, farm-to-table and organic restaurants, artisan food and beverages makers, organic garden services and supplies, and a host of business members who support organic lifestyles.

How to Use This Guide: Refer to the County listings, Business Member section, and the Index to Products and Services to discover the rich food landscape in Connecticut. We recommend you use this guide to:

1. Plan your food shopping by scanning for nearby farms, grocers, bakers, artisan producers, co-ops, delivery services and more.

2. Discover new restaurants serving locally sourced and organic foods, including vegetarian and vegan destinations.

3. Find organic farm supplies, consultants, certifiers or a NOFA accredited landscaper for your home or commercial property.

4. Plan your spring and fall garden with seed companies, nurseries, garden centers and clubs, farms selling transplants, and businesses that will plant and maintain your organic garden.

TIPS:

- Consider a CSA share from a farm near you. Check CT NOFA’s local CSA list online.
- Plan your next agri-tourism adventure to a new farm, winery, brewery, distillery or another memorable destination.
- Keep this guide and your reusable shopping bags in your car so you have them when you shop in new towns.
- If you lose CT NOFA’s 2016 Farm & Food Guide, check out our digital version online or contact us for a new copy by mail.

Thank you, Harbor Harvest! Our 2016 Farm & Food Guide Underwriter

We thank Bob Kunkel from Harbor Harvest for generously underwriting the 2016 Farm & Food Guide. Harbor Harvest is a new CT NOFA business member based in Norwalk that is emblematic of the kind of neighborhood market we hope to see more of in the future - one where local and organic fruits, vegetables, local artisan products, and top-quality meats take center stage.

We highly recommend you visit their market in Norwalk for some fine provisions. While shopping, you can learn about Harbor Harvest’s extraordinary plan to establish a water-based, food transportation network that will allow local farms to expand their distribution locally and regionally. This is the kind of project that can strengthen our local food system, create new entrepreneurs to serve the needs of our producers and residents, and bring a greater abundance of fresh healthy foods closer to our homes. Our hats off to Bob and the team!

Learn about Harbor Harvest and this project on the inside back cover and on page 12.

What is the Farmer’s Pledge?

Farmers who sign CT NOFA’s Farmer’s Pledge promise to follow ecologically-sustainable agriculture and fair business practices. Look for the Farmer’s Pledge logo at local farm stands and markets.

We pledge that in our farming, processing, and marketing we will:

- Build and maintain healthy soils by applying farming practices that include rotating crops annually, using compost, cover crops, green manures, and reducing tillage
- Serve the health of soil, people and nature by rejecting the use of synthetic insecticides, herbicides, fungicides, and fertilizers
- Reject the use of GMOs, chemically treated seeds, synthetic toxic materials, irradiation, and sewage sludge in our farming, and all synthetic substances in all post harvest handling
- Treat livestock humanely by providing pasture for ruminants, access to outdoors and fresh air for all livestock, banning cruel alterations, and using no hormones, GMOs or antibiotics in feed
- Handle raw manure and soil amendments with care
- Support agricultural markets and infrastructure that enable small farms to thrive
- Conserve natural resources including the atmosphere and climate by reducing erosion and pollution of air, soil and water through responsible farming practices
- Maximize the nutritional value of food and feed by practicing careful post harvest handling
- Practice minimal processing for all food products to preserve the natural nutritional value of food: NO use of irradiation, ultra-pasteurization, excessive heat, synthetic preservatives, or GMO processing agents or additives, and include all ingredients on labels
- Ensure food safety by using potable water for washing crops
- Reduce the ecological footprint of farms and homes by limiting energy use and converting to renewable sources of energy
- Reduce food miles by selling produce locally and regionally
- Create beneficial habitat for wildlife and encourage biodiversity
- Help preserve farmland
- Share and develop farming skills and know-how
- Use ethical business practices
- Pay a living wage to all farm workers and acknowledge their freedom of association and their right to collective bargaining
- Treat family members and farm workers with respect, and ensure their safety on the farm
- Work in cooperation with other farmers and with the neighboring community to create a more sustainable way of life
- Encourage the distribution of unsold but edible food to people who need it
- Sustain the land in healthy condition for future generations

The CT NOFA Farmer’s Pledge program is a way for members to show their commitment to ecologically-sustainable farming, strong local economies, the humane treatment of animals, and the wise stewardship of land. The Pledge is open to CT NOFA members who attest that they adhere to the pledge and sign it annually.

The Pledge can be signed by both Certified Organic growers and growers who are using ecologically-sustainable methods. CT NOFA’s Farmer’s Pledge and the USDA Certified Organic program’s principles have much in common but the Pledge is not meant to be a substitute for certification. The USDA has a third party inspect the farm and its records are reviewed for compliance.

Of course, knowing your farmer is the best assurance that the food you buy is responsibly grown and those who sign the Pledge also agree that customers may visit their farms by appointment.

We hope you enjoy discovering new farmers through the Farmer’s Pledge program.

Look in the County Sections for Farmer’s Pledge symbol and the USDA Certified Organic seal.
Know Your Food

Use this guide to learn about what different labels mean and why it's best to buy organic and sustainably raised food.

Q. Who can tell me what organic means?
A. The use of the word organic and its meaning are controlled by the USDA and its National Organic Program (NOP). USDA Certified Organic is a labeling term for marketing purposes to inform consumers. The USDA organic seal means that the product is produced in accordance with the National Organic Standards (ams.usda.gov).

Q. What is CT NOFA’s role in the USDA National Organic Program?
A. The USDA organic standards and certification process grew out of nearly two decades of state certification programs created by NOFA chapters, including CT NOFA, and sister organizations throughout the country. Since the USDA took control of the word organic in 2002, NOFA chapters and our partners have been working to uphold and strengthen the standards.

Q. Why should I eat organic?
A. Choosing certified organic food has many positive effects. According to the USDA, “The primary goal of organic agriculture is to optimize the health and productivity of interdependent communities of soil life, plants, animals and people.”

Many people want to eat organic foods to protect their health. They want to vote with their dollars for more organic farming and the environmental and social benefits it brings. This is what you and your family, our farm workers and our environment get with USDA Certified Organic:
- No genetically-engineered seeds
- No GMOs in animal feed
- No genetically-engineered ingredients
- No chemical fertilizers
- No synthetic pesticides
- No antibiotics or hormones
- No sewage sludge
- No irradiation

Q. What do Genetically Engineered and GMO mean?
A. Genetic engineering is a radical new technology that forces genetic information across the protective species barrier in an unnatural way. GMOs or genetically modified organisms are plants or animals that have been genetically engineered with DNA from bacteria, viruses or other plants and animals in an attempt to introduce a new trait or characteristic. These experimental combinations of genes from different species cannot occur in nature or in traditional crossbreeding. Genetic engineering differs profoundly from conventional seed selection and breeding, which has been going on since the beginning of agriculture. Even hybridization, which is relatively new, achieves expression of genetic material already present within a species, not by inserting foreign genetic material in an unnatural way. Hybridization uses processes that occur in nature, such as sexual and asexual reproduction, and employs the genetic potential of the species.

Q. Are GMOs bad for my health, and the health of my children and grandchildren?
A. Virtually all commercial GMOs are engineered to withstand direct application of herbicide and some are created to also produce their own insecticide. A growing body of evidence connects GMOs with health problems, environmental damage and violation of farmers’ and consumers’ rights.

Q. How can I avoid GMOs?
A. GMOs can be in the foods you eat first hand, and also in the feed given to animals you eat. Certified Organic means no GMOs, among many other things. Products that bear the Non-GMO Project Verified label (nongmoproject.org) do not have GMOs in them. Some, but not all, Non-GMO Project Verified foods are also certified organic.

Q. How else does organic shape the communities and environment our children and grandchildren will live in?
A. A foundation of healthy soils and ecosystems is what makes organic systems successful, and adds to their importance. As the USDA states: “Organic agriculture is an ecological production management system that promotes and enhances biodiversity, biological cycles and soil biological activity. It is based on minimal use of off-farm inputs and on management practices that restore, maintain and enhance ecological harmony.”

Q. Which farmers can use the word organic?
A. A beginning or small-scale farmer selling less than $5,000 worth of product a year can call the vegetables, meat or eggs at a roadside or market stand organic if s/he follows the USDA's Organic Standards. In all other cases agricultural products sold as organic need to be certified by an accredited certifying agency. Baystate Organic Certifiers (baystateorganic.org) certifies most of the farms in Connecticut.
Q. Why should farmers with more than $5,000 in sales a year become certified organic?
A. It is important to have as many farms as possible, especially small farms, be Certified Organic in order to be counted and have a voice in the upholding of the National Organic Standards. The more Certified Organic farms there are, the more resources, research and support organic farmers and systems will receive.

You can feel good about suggesting that farmers get certified in order to keep building and sustaining the organic movement.

Q. What is involved with certification?
A. We often hear farmers say that certification requires too much paperwork or costs too much money. However, many certified organic farmers say the required Organic Farm Plan, the heart of certification, is a very useful tool in organizing and running a farm. Many organizations provide free templates and online tools for developing this plan (attracat.org/organic.html and rodaleinstitute.org/farm/organic-system-plan).

For many certified growers, three quarters of the cost of certification is reimbursed through an organic cost-share program authorized by the Farm Bill and administered by the Connecticut Department of Agriculture (ct.gov/doag).

Q. Who besides farmers can use the word organic?
A. You can say you have an organic home garden and your community can say it has an organic community garden because these are descriptions, not marketing claims. Your town can say it has adopted the NOFA Standards for Organic Land Care to govern the way its parks, greens and school grounds are managed because it is referring to a standard of service, not marketing a product.

Q. What other labels are there related to agricultural practices?
A. Other labels such as Certified Naturally Grown (naturallygrown.org) and CT NOFA’s Farmer’s Pledge indicate that the farmer abides by standards similar to those for organic. These labels may provide enough information in a face to face sale, but the farms cannot be considered certified organic. Therefore, these labels can mask the real growth in organic production, in the number of farmers using organic methods and in the demand for organic, as these farms are not counted as organic by the USDA.

Q. What does 100% Grass Fed mean?
A. 100% Grass Fed means just that, and the animals will not have eaten GMO feed. Other grass fed animals eating less than 100% grass, whose meat is not certified organic, will likely have eaten GMO feed.

Q. What does Natural mean?
A. Natural means nothing. It’s meaning has not been defined in the U.S. except for meat, poultry or eggs, where it means no artificial colors or flavors, synthetic ingredients or chemical preservatives.

It does not mean non-GMO - you should assume that all animals have eaten GMO feed, unless they are USDA Certified Organic, Non-GMO Verified, 100% Grass Fed, Farmer’s Pledge or Certified Naturally Grown.

Q. What about packaged goods labeled Natural?
A. In this case Natural means nothing at all and you should assume these foods contain GMOs unless labeled otherwise, if they contain corn, canola, soy, cottonseed and sugar from sugar beets.

Q. Am I safe if I’m eating cage-free or free-range chickens or eggs, and meat from animals raised humanely with access to the outdoors?
A. Unless what you’re eating is also USDA Certified Organic, or has other trusted designations, what these labels say about meat, poultry and eggs means at most just what they say and no more. We say at most, because some of these labels are not defined or regulated by the USDA. There are Certified Humane and other labels you can read about online. They don’t necessarily require organic or non-GMO feed. Read carefully!

Q. What does Local mean?
A. Local can vary in terms of the number of miles your food has traveled to your plate. The more local the organic farms are that you buy from, the more benefits there are to our communities, to the nutritional value of your food, and to the environment. Local also gives you the opportunity to know your farmer, visit the farm and to truly know your food. The Connecticut Department of Agriculture (ct.gov/doag) and buyctgrown.com are currently working to strengthen the Connecticut Grown label so that consumers look for and buy local Connecticut food whenever possible.

Q. What is the new Food Justice Certified label?
A. It is a label based on high-bar social justice standards for farms, processors and retailers, including every link in the food chain from seed to table. NOFA was a founder of the Agricultural Justice Project (agriculturaljusticeproject.org) which created and administers this label. This certification may be combined with local sourcing and organic certification for those who want Local, Organic and Fair food.

Connecticut Department of Agriculture Funding Assists Organic Farms

“Don’t panic, it’s organic!”

The slogan is proudly proclaimed on the Facebook page of George Hall Farm, which began using organic growing methods in 1966 and became certified organic in 1979. With 100 acres in production, the farm raises produce, eggs, honey, and pork, which it offers through its longstanding CSA program and farm stand at 180 Old Farms Road in Simsbury, and at more than a dozen farmers’ markets throughout the state.

In 2012, the farm applied for a Connecticut Department of Agriculture (DoAg) Farm Transition grant. The agency awarded the farm $16,500 toward a $33,100 project to construct a new barn roof and new chicken coop. According to Daren Hall, who took over management of the farm after its patriarch, George Hall, Sr., passed away at the age of 87 in November 2014, the DoAg grant has played a significant role in the farm’s long-term viability.

“Our barn had more than used up its shingle-life,” Daren explained. “Thanks to this grant, we were able to put on shingles that will serve us for another 40 years, which we otherwise wouldn’t have been able to do. And thanks to George’s work to forever protect and preserve this land for agricultural use, we definitely plan to get the full life out of these new shingles!”

“The grant also allowed us to increase our chicken flock from 75 to 200 hens initially, and now to 350,” he continued. “Our customers are crazy about our eggs, and now we can meet the demand from all of our CSA members and farmers’ market customers, which we couldn’t do before we built the new coop. It’s made a big difference for our farm.”

DoAg offers a number of funding opportunities to organic - and other - farms in Connecticut, including the Farm Transition grant, Farm Reinvestment grant, Environmental Assistance program, and Governor Malloy’s own Farm Restoration grant. In addition, DoAg administers the Organic Certification Cost-Share grant, which reimburses farms up to $750 of their organic certification costs each year.

Go Organic With an AOLCP!

A NOFA AOLCP is someone who’s taken CT NOFA’s 30 hour training course, passed the test, and maintains their credentials as an Accredited Organic Land Care Professional (AOLCP). NOFA’s AOLCPs are taught the latest organic landscaping practices and join a community of nearly 2000 professionals trained by NOFA over the last 15 years! If you are looking for non-toxic services, you are looking for an AOLCP!

Profile of a NOFA Accredited Professional

Name: Dan Corra, Business Manager
Business name: Plantscapes Organics
Website: plantscapesorganics.com
How many employees are Accredited? 3 accredited employees
Accredited: AOLCP Class of 2005–9 years
How do you advertise your NOFA Accreditation:
✓ website
✓ print materials
✓ logo on trucks
✓ hand out NOFA materials, such as Introduction to Organic Lawns and Yards, brochures

“I truly believe the NOFA accreditation has been important to our business because it helps legitimize our company as well as the organic landscaping services we are providing. Also, the accreditation allows us to differentiate ourselves from our competition. Lastly, being able to direct potential clients to the NOFA website provides a platform to gather more information about organic landscaping and reinforces our company’s core message.”

The Northeast Organic Farming Association of Connecticut (CT NOFA)
Good soil management helps promote the growth of healthy plants that absorb sunlight.

Day after day, carbon dioxide gas is pumped into the air, warming up our planet and threatening our environment.

Fortunately for us, there’s a solution -- and it’s right underneath our feet.

Organic farming is here to save us! TA-DAH!

Some of the sugars in these ‘liquid’ carbohydrates are ‘leaked’ or exuded down through the roots and, like magic, attract hungry microbes in the ground -- like bacteria and fungi.

Plants then use their own chlorophyll along with carbon dioxide and water to produce -- carbohydrates!

Together, green plants and organisms in the ground protect and promote each other’s health.

Best of all, this process locks the carbon into organic matter, can create humus in the soil and...

...that keeps our planet healthy!

Connecticut agriculture – from greenhouse operations to aquaculture to farm markets – provides a $4.8 billion boost to the state economy. And with more than 430,000 acres of farmland, Connecticut ag businesses celebrate a diversity that is second to none.

Farm Credit East is proud to work with agricultural businesses throughout the state, and we are committed to helping young people get involved in agriculture through our FarmStart® and GenerationNext programs. Thanks to our competitive rates and ag-specific financial services, Connecticut producers have turned to Farm Credit East for support for nearly 100 years. How can we help you?
